'Red' Invasion of Boston

Do you know that alien radicals are at work in Boston, advocating the overthrow of all law and all government?

Do you know the organizations that are blazing the trail for this vicious propaganda, and what they hope to achieve?

The Boston American starts today a series of articles dealing with the underground activities of these Boston "Reds," which no one interested in his city's safety can afford to ignore. These articles show that the propaganda carried on here is not haphazard, but part of a well-conceived plan to bring on a world revolution. They show that the trail of the "Red" leads from the hums of the immigrant struggling for bread to the Black Bay home of the "patriotic Bolshevik."

They show that hundreds of persons in this community profess the principles of Treason and Lenin, and continued on Page 3, Column 1.

FEAR GIRL LOST IN SWAMP

Hingham, Nov. 3.—Searching parties of Boy Scouts and 200 local citizens are today beating the brush and swamp south of Barnstable in an effort to locate pretty fourteen-year-old Lilian Marsh, who mysteriously dropped out of sight yesterday.

Two theories are entertained by the local police and searchers: the first that the girl may have become lost in a treacherous swamp which covers fifty acres between here and Craigville; the second that the girl may have been stolen from her home or kidnapped.

Working upon the latter theory, the police have searched camps in the vicinity without success. All trails leading to the town are searched in the belief that the girl may have been sent to have her home. The search continued on Page 3, Column 3.

EACH PARTY IN FINAL APPEAL

Under the Coolidge or Long? Governor ranged from ten to eight in ten to four today, with comparatively few takers. Saturday the odds on the Governor were two to one. Reports from Springfield stated that most of a pool of $20,000 raised by Long adherents had been placed on him at four to five. In the same city it was also reported that one bet of $20,000 to $10,000 was made that Coolidge will not win by 20,000.

The eyes of the nation were focused today on Massachusetts, where the battle preliminary to the State election was being fought.

Governor Coolidge brought his campaign for re-election to a close with a "far and order" speech at the Faneuil Hall noon-day rally today. He then left for Northampton, where he will vote tomorrow.

Governor Coolidge referred to the police situation in these words: "The people of this Commonwealth have amply responded to the call of every duty. When 1,000 fell out of the ranks, 10,000 stepped in and continued on Page 3, Column 3.

MEN WILLING TO TREAT WITH COAL OPERATORS

Washington, Nov. 3.—The coalminers are willing to negotiate with the coal operators on either the basis of the present selling price of coal or upon the basis of the cost of necessities, Edgar Wallace, Washington representative of the United Mine Workers of America, declared this afternoon.

The end of the coal strike by Saturday was freely predicted at the American Federation of Labor headquarters today. There was a prevalent opinion that the miners and the operators would get together for a settlement.

The government stands ready to do all in its power to bring about a settlement of the controversy between the miners and the operators, declared Attorney-General Palmer this afternoon, "but in the meantime the law must be enforced and combinations to stop production cannot be tolerated."

The Attorney-General's statement was made in response to a telegram received by President Wilson from the United Mine Workers of America Union 3768 at Glencoe, Ohio, protesting against the administration's attitude. The Attorney-General's telegram was in line with the policy announced at the White House today.

Surely we can do this

THE Boston Metropolitan District is asked to re-enroll 300,000 members on the Third Red Cross Roll Call.

In addition it is also asked to raise $500,000 to enable the American Red Cross to complete its overseas obligations. This is about 10% of last year's subscription.

We may all be feeling poor, but surely we are not going to abandon the American Red Cross—the Greatest Mother of Them All—its work must not fail.

Seven thousand workers will start this morning in the house to house, office to office, grind. It is hard, tedious, drab work.

You will find them in stores, in hotels, on the street—everywhere. They are doing our work.

Make it easy for them. Enroll willingly and subscribe generously when asked. Forward their requests.

Place your subscription with any bank or trust company or send cheque, payable to American Red Cross, to George W. Hyde, Treasurer, care First National Bank, Boston.

IN two ways "courage" is an essential Congress Shirt attribute. Courageous men are virile types of manhood that very often require a flannel shirt.

There is no flannel shirt made that will stand up under the service such a man gives a flannel shirt as a Congress will.

How to Relieve the Sugar Shortage

A respectful suggestion in an open letter to the District Attorney

Mr. District Attorney:

The newspapers announce that you propose to investigate Saccharin. Saccharin welcomes the fullest investigation. It asks nothing more.

I respectfully suggest that it would be equally to the interests of the people at Boston—and to the people of the whole United States—if at the same time you would investigate the causes of the present sugar famine.

In regard to Saccharin—do you know that Saccharin is used as a sweetening agent in all civilized countries except the United States in place of, or as an auxiliary to, sugar?

Do you know that enough Saccharin is available in this country for use in foods and beverages, in which the added food value of sugar is not desired, to release not less than one hundred million pounds of sugar annually for uses where sugar's food value is necessary?

Do you know that the use of such quantity of Saccharin would reduce the high cost of living not less than eleven million dollars annually in the one item of sugar?

Do you know that at the last three sessions of the Massachusetts State Legislature bills were introduced to prohibit the use of Saccharin, and the bills were killed each time, because Saccharin was shown to be harmless?

Do you know that our Government permits the use of Saccharin in foods intended for invalids, and, therefore, Saccharin is not considered harmful for them? It would be interesting, therefore, to know why the officials of the Department of Agriculture think it harmful to persons in normal health.

Do you know that Saccharin has been used continuously for over 35 years with no single case on record of its having done harm?

The greatest body of Scientists ever brought together in this country on a single question, and appointed by the United States Government, after a full and thorough investigation, reported favorably on Saccharin. Investigations made for other Governments found likewise.

Press dispatches announce that the U. S. Department of Agriculture holds "Saccharin is a harmful drug, the use of which is deleterious to health." Saccharin is no more a drug than sugar. Both are used in medicine. Saccharin is a chemical compound, the same as salt (chloride of sodium) and both are used for the same purpose—a flavor for food.

If the Government will seize a food product sweetened with Saccharin which has been shipped in Interstate Commerce, the quality of which comes within the provisions of the Pure Food Law, and makes the seizure because it is sweetened with Saccharin, and will immediately prosecute the shipper, we will donate $1000.00 to any charitable institution the Chamber of Commerce may direct.

We have been urging the officials of the Government for over seven years to bring a case in court to test the question, but the issue has been sidestepped. Why?

Saccharin can be used in the household and can be had in the form of tablets, each tablet having equal strength of one lump or teaspoonful of sugar. Two boxes, costing 15 cents and containing 100 tablets each, have the sweetening power of more than three pounds of sugar.

Respectfully,

JOHN F. QUEENY, Chairman of the Board

CHAPTER I.
BOSTON—WAKE UP!
Foreign propagandists of extreme tendencies are serving right here in this city to foment a revolution in this country and set up a Soviet or government.

This underground or covert destructive radiation, swift and silent, is gradually washing away the foundations of American educational, social, industrial and political structures. In a general way it is making their meaning dangerous to the continued welfare and existence of the present American government.

BOAST OF SUCCESS.
It is being carried on at its very doors. Right here in Boston the local branches and State office of the Communist Party of America, are carrying on propaganda of this nature and sending the Corps of organizers and agitators throughout the State. Meetings are being arranged, and propaganda literature is being distributed in the most effective manner from the harmless party variety to the most dangerous.

the red, violent and intensely rabid, advocates of Communism and Anarchy, are infusing this city and other cities throughout the country, spreading their doctrine of "healthy threat," and impressing it upon the minds of the young and the ignorant, who they term "educational propaganda." In anticipation of creating a new "Red" up and coming American movement, the Communist Party of America is revealing its very doors to the public. For this purpose radicals are using the most effective means, by using a newspaper investigator, their methods studied and their literature investigated.

BOSTON A RADICAL HOT BED.
Conditions found here show that Boston is a potential hotbed for a nation-wide movement for revolution. This is not confined to the Communist group entirely. The I. W. W. is very active, too. And labor organizations of radical nature.

One building on Washington street, on the very outskirts of the business district, was found to be occupied entirely by radical organizations opposed to the present industrial or political order. The degree of radicalism of the members of all three of our organizations is very little. In fact, they are all working along the lines of the One Big Union idea.

Each night the One Big Union idea is being spread by the use of a "Red" propaganda. The One Big Union idea is being spread by the use of a "Red" propaganda. The One Big Union idea is being spread by the use of a "Red" propaganda.

REPORTERS ARE BARRED.
Conversations with "reporters of sensational news" are strictly prohibited. And the same reporters are barred from all meetings of the Communist. This edict was recently installed in their rules and regulations. With them it is almost an unbreakable offense to be caught giving out information regarding their meetings and progress.

These quantities of literature are circulated from these headquarters, apparently because of the vast amount on hand at all times. It is stored in corners and piled high on shelves, ready for distribution as the need arises. This literature is of highly revolutionary calibre and finds its way into the homes of the labor union, the factories and mills, the office, the street, even into the laundries and the homes of the city workers.

VOLUNTEER COMMITTEES BUSY.
Propaganda material is also distributed by what is known as "volunteer committees" in various shops and factories. This method of distribution is particularly prominent in New York and the Western States; but Boston, too, has its distinction in this line.

Material distributed in each fashion is largely composed of inflammatory weekly and monthly newspapers and magazines, which are purchased from the publishers in bundle lots at reduced rates.

with which they intend to battle "conservative traditionism." If money for such purposes is not readily available, the "Reds" are "comrade" or "fellow-worker" gather a small group together and plan an entertainment or lecture. The lecturer being available from the nearest local office of the Communist, or other revolutionary organization, upon agreement to defray all expenses involved in sending the speaker. With the money derived from such a source the committee orders the required literature from the local, or directly with the publishers, and sets out to distribute it to the workers on the job.

The phrase "On the job" was interpreted to mean "among the workers" or "in the shop." The committee doing such work is gradually enlarged by the addition of recruits from the rank and file of the shop meeting, called by them, gradually new committees are started in other shops, and they too involve the idea of Industrial Unionism.

FOR "ONE BIG UNION."
The purpose and policy of such committees is made plain in "The Voice of Labor" of recent issue. This revolutionary magazine, at the head of its editorial column, declares its principles "For Labor's Organization in the One Big Union." It is edited by John Reed, an American journalist and war correspondent. The work of Reed and his associates is to lead the masses of the working class of America to the "One Big Union" idea.

Vote No!

On the ballot election day will appear the question: "Shall Chapter 116, General Acts of 1919, approved by the General Court without division, which provides that deposits in savings banks and savings departments of trust companies may be placed on interest once a month and not oftener; that dividends on such deposits may be declared semi-annually and not oftener, and that interest shall not be paid on any such deposits withdrawn between dividend days, be approved."

This law prohibited the payments of interest on savings deposits any oftener than once in six months and caused the filing of the first referendum petition in Massachusetts. As soon as its contents became publicly known Simon Swig commenced an agitation in the public press for its repeal and caused to be filed with the Secretary of State referendum petitions containing thousands of signatures. Mr. Swig carried the fight for its repeal into the Legislature, insisting that the law was smuggled through under a misleading title and that banks should be permitted to pay interest on savings deposits monthly. He won the fight in the Legislature, but by some technicality the law has to be submitted to the people.

The question as it appears on the ballot calls for the approval or disapproval of the law as it was first passed by the Legislature. In that form it was objectionable. By some strange mistake the voters have not been informed of the situation. The law was so bad that when it appeared that it must be submitted to the people the very Legislature which passed it repealed it in a great hurry. The law which they thus repealed is THE LAW which will appear on the ballot tomorrow. VOTE "NO."

State Aid to Veterans in Acquiring Homes

Senator Edwin T. McKnight has filed an interesting bill to "provide State assistance to veterans in acquiring homes." This is an excellent scheme. There is no more substantial and lasting way to aid a man than to aid in acquiring a home if he wants one.

Of course, there are methods of acquiring a home which SEEM more helpful than in truth they are, but the purpose of Senator McKnight's bill shows that a genuine and substantial aid is intended.

The State will provide a home costing five thousand dollars and will charge an interest not to exceed five per cent. and arrange for the payment on small monthly installments easily able to be made by a man during good health, and it provides in the case of sickness or death that the State officials may make arrangements for relief during the period of his sickness and his widow and orphans in case of his death. We cannot do too much for our soldiers and no form of relief is more permanent and stabilizing than the scheme which Senator McKnight has formulated in this bill.

We Should Refuse to Join Any League of World Pillage

The world has for months been told almost daily that the people of Russia were not in sympathy with the Soviet system of government and would seize the first opportunity of successful foreign intervention to arise and cast off their Bolshevik oppressors. Yet foreign armies attacking the Soviet government on all fronts were withstood by the Soviet forces for two years, notwithstanding that Russia, in the three preceding years, had sustained more severe war losses and economic exhaustion than any other nation. Also notwithstanding an economic blockade which with increasing effectiveness denied to the Russian people all supplies from other countries.

And much testimony from Russia attests that when these invading foreign armies, with their caravans of auxiliaries, were beaten back from a given area the people in that area have sometimes organized new soviet and continued to fight.

In addition to military activity directed against the Soviets, the architects of the not yet constituted League of Nations, with the implied assent of our American representatives at Paris, are declaring a world-wide boycott of Russia, for the avowed purpose of forcing upon the Russian people, not the kind of government which they want, but the kind of government which the dictators in the new Holy Alliance think they should have.

This is notice in advance of what a secret League of Nations uncontrolled by Congress will mean if those who are active in its organization shall continue to control its functioning. It will mean:

Not democracy.

Not the right of subject peoples to change institutions and rulers that become oppressive and to set up institutions and rulers of their own selection.

Not freedom as the world has come to be endeared to Americans during the 142 years following their own successful uprising against a tyranny imposed from without.

But the frankly dictatorial rule of a master class functioning against groups who ignore constitutions and defy laws to move armed forces in private wars and who seek to wield the centralized power of world finance and world industry to compel universal acceptance of their way.

Do not be deceived into thinking that Russia is the only theatre in which secret diplomacy and intrigue will have full sway.

But by the same use of censorship and propaganda they could interfere in the affairs of any other people and pave the way for imperialism.

The accents in which American membership in this League of World Pillage is being solicited are very honeyed, and the solicitors just now sorely need our money, our credit, our commercial assistance and the moral indorsement of our hitherto unsullied national renown.

But the quality of a tree is shown by its fruit, and in this proposal to starve the people of Russia into accepting a government of foreign manufacture we have a fruit of the tree of Versailles which ought to cause every intelligent American to pause for reflection.

There were earlier fruits which should have warned us.

The secret treaties.

The seizure of Egypt, Persia, Mesopotamia, the German colonies in Africa and the pick of the islands of the seas.

The rape of Shantung.

And similar rapacities on almost every section of the map, resulting in more than a score of minor wars, with the returns not yet all in.

But as it was our own President who said that the allies' treatment of Russia would be "the acid test" of their good faith, it is fair and timely to make that treatment the basis of our ap-

More Truth Than Poetry

Look Wise and Make a Big Noise

By S. E. KISER

Courtesy had what Cato thought a great point in a soldier, not only strength of hand and stroke, but also a voice and look that of themselves were a terror to an enemy.—Plutarch.

THINK not that you may sway the crowd

By soft and gentle speaking;

Be on your toes; indulge in loud

And energetic shrieking.

Unless you strut and learn to let

Your chest have full inflation.

The talent you may have will get

You little admiration.

OBSERVE the man who wins applause

And leads where others follow;

He may advance a foolish cause,

His bragging may be hollow.

But by the fierceness of his threats,

Or by rip-snorting capers,

He makes the mob believe, and gets

His name in all the papers.

It matters little, if at all,

How wise you are or able.

Your worth will be considered small,

Unless you pound the table;

Truth claims attention only when

It has become dramatic;

In saying five and five are ten,

Be noisy and emphatic.

YOUR gifts may be superlative,

But few will flock about you,

Unless you find the way to go;

A child to those who doubt you;

The noisy blusterer succeeds

In spreading the impression

That all the talents Greatness needs

Are safe in his possession.

IF modesty within you lies,

Get rid of that affliction;

Tell other people you are wise,

And say it with conviction;

The boast you make may not be true,

But go the limit—yell it!

For others knowing less than you

Will take it as you tell it.

ASTRONOMY EXTENDS CREDIT TO GEOLOGY

By Garrett P. Serviss

It is that controversy between astronomy and geology about the age of the earth—55,000,000 years and 200,000,000 years, respectively—settled—M. H. W.

YOUR question enables me to touch again upon a recent development of astronomical research of the highest possible interest. By study of some of the most distant objects in the heavens light has been thrown upon a problem which it might have been thought could only be solved from data to be found here on the earth.

The "controversy" between geology and astronomy may be put in a nutshell as follows:

Geology demands a couple of hundred million years at least—some would claim a thousand millions—for the development of the vast system of stratified rocks of which the outer part of the earth's crust consists, and for the evolution of the living organisms, animal and vegetable, that inhabit it.

Astronomy (i. e., the astronomy of the last half century), replies: "According to our conception of stellar evolution, it is not possible for the sun (and, therefore, the earth) to have been more than about 20,000,000 years in existence."

Contraction Theory

This is based on the "contraction theory" of the development and radiative activity of a sun. This theory assumes that the sun is contracting under the influence of its own gravitation, drawing its particles ever closer together and thus producing slow shrinkage of its diameter. Helmholtz's calculations showed that an annual shrinkage of the sun's diameter amounting to only 250 feet would account, by the law of transformation of energy, for its present outgiving of light and heat.

And when the calculation was carried backward it was found that 20,000,000 or 25,000,000 years ago the sun must have been a vast expanded nebula, extending out to the orbit of the most distant of its present planets. At that time the planets were unborn in the nebula.

So, when geology drew on astronomy a 300,000,000-year check, astronomy replied, "We can find only about one-fourth of that sum to your credit."

Spectrum Shows Age

The spectrum of a star's light gives an indication of that star's state of development, or its relative age. Now, remembering that light requires a certain time to travel a given distance—it goes nearly 800,000,000 miles in a year—it is evident that if we have two stars that were born at about the same time, situated at different distances in space, the stage of development represented by the light of the nearer one will be later than that represented by the light of the farther one and, because of their difference of distance, if that difference is sufficiently great, we may find a corresponding difference in their spectra, which will serve to show how much time is required for certain evolutionary changes to occur in a star.

Now, recent studies have shown that some globular star clusters are at least a hundred thousand light-years in one case (the difference is 180,000 years) further away than other clusters of the same kind. But comparison of their spectra shows no perceptible difference, although according to the contraction theory 100,000 years, or even 25,000, should suffice to produce a very notable spectral change. The conclusion is that there must be some other, much more slowly acting, cause than mere contraction, work to produce stellar evolution, and this supports the claim of geology for a far larger credit in millions of years than astronomy was formerly disposed to grant.

There are two other points to be considered. One is the fact that the stars in the globular clusters are not all of the same kind, but are of various kinds, and the other is the fact that the stars in the globular clusters are not all of the same age, but are of various ages. This is a very important point, and it is one that geology has been able to show. The stars in the globular clusters are not all of the same kind, but are of various kinds, and the other is the fact that the stars in the globular clusters are not all of the same age, but are of various ages. This is a very important point, and it is one that geology has been able to show.

Men Die Ingeniously

A new kind of suicide is invented by a Frenchman, Adrien Thumerel. Men often show more ingenuity in ending their lives than in making the life worth while.

A well-known ancient philosopher jumped into the mouth of a volcano. He wanted to increase the world with his weird end. That was vanity.

A Russian prisoner feared that torture would make him betray his friends, and he endured agony to make his friends safe. In the wall of his cell, high up, was a small, smoky oil lamp with bare flame. He lit himself about the flame, holding to the bars of the cell window, until he had burned in his side a hole big enough to chafe death. That was courage, such as thousands of women and men have shown fighting the Czar.

One young Russian woman, sentenced to death for killing a brutal officer in Siberia, could have saved herself by letting it be known that she was about to become a mother. The Czar's brutality let him send women to Siberia, but his superstitious would not let him kill an unborn child. The young woman deliberately allowed herself to be executed to make the Czar worry on learning, too late, of her condition.

Men have fallen on their sword points, jumped over cliffs on horseback, tried all kinds of poisons and weapons. The blind King of Bohemia had his horse chained between the horses of two faithful soldiers, and with them rode into the thick of battle, lacking at the unseen enemy with his sword until he and the two were dead.

The latest is thoroughly modern and scientific. Monsieur Thumerel and his fair one were unhappy; the world had disappointed them. In fact, Monsieur was accused of stealing horses.

He was determined that the world should hear about him, and it did. He got thirty-five pounds of melinite, the highest sort of explosive, and hid it in a small box, and exploded himself out of the world. The noise was heard for miles, property was destroyed around, and there was not enough left of the two bodies to make a canary's funeral.

There is no moral to this, but it is interesting to note that such ideas are locked up in half-developed human beings, who believe that a useless life can be made better by a noisy death.

A question important now and that may continue to be important for many years, or at least long enough to upset the country seriously, is this: Just what can the government do to control great bodies of organized working men seeking to regulate their wages and hours through industrial fights when those fights appear to menace the general welfare?

You can have courts enjoin the men from striking. That has already been tried, but the men have struck.

You can have soldiers to protect those willing to work against those that are on strike. That experiment will be tried today.

You may, by injunction, through contempt of court proceedings and by action of the nation's legal department, punish men for conspiring to violate court orders. But you cannot punish a man for not working in a coal mine if he does not want to work there.

A big problem has been growing up slowly, getting bigger and bigger, and the war, with the reckless outpouring of money and the great increase in wages, has brought on the crisis.

In a few weeks or months the country will know a good deal more about the power of government when it deals with bodies of men running like the millions.
